Hi Stephanie,

Thank you for plugging ExRx.net.

I noticed the images that have been harvested from our site have been cropped so the copyright notices no longer appear.

Even printed at such a small size I am hoping the copyright will still be legible.

If they need to be cropped, would you be able to restore the copyright notice in each image?

In a higher end photo editing tool, you can select the copyright and move it within the part of the image that will not be cropped.

In addition we would need to be provided credit for the images somewhere within your manuscript, something to the effect of Anatomy images used with permission by ExRx.net.

Alternatively you can enter a caption or notice on each page the images appear, stating the same.

I hope that will work for your purposes.

Subject: Submitting a Manuscript for Submission

Hello,

My name is Stephanie Peeples and I am preparing a manuscript for submission. I am writing an article on instructional strategies for fitness, and I list exrx.net as a valuable resource for educators and other practitioners. I would like to use the figures attached to this email in the manuscript. Can you please direct me to permissions to use such content?Thank you,
Stephanie
